

Kaneohe Marine Corp Base

Kaneohe Marine Corp Base is located in the northern eastern side of the island. As one of the biggest military bases in Hawaii. This station serves as a training ground for the Navy and Marine Corp military and experimentation for military weapons. Since 1918, this base has been a vital part in protecting the western side of the island. After WWII, the base tripled in size and furthered development of Kaneohe as a major town. This base was also critical in the development of highways in the Hawaii. Since the attack on Pearl Harbor many generals wanted to transport troops faster. Soon during 1960's the H1 and later the H2 was built, not for the citizen but, for the military. In addition to that, the construction of the Highways and the discovery of Hawaiian sites and bones during this process help put into effect many construction and conservations laws we see present in today's society.

Sources

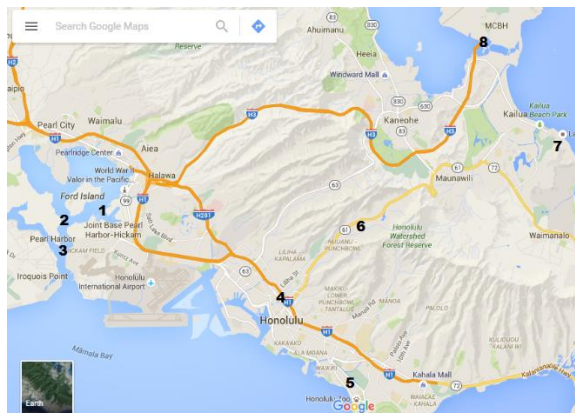

Hawaii Stars presents: U.S. Army in Hawaii, a Brilliant Past, an Exciting Future. (2002). Retrieved April 05, 2016, from <http://www.hiarmymuseumsoc.org/>

HawaiiHistory.org - Hawaii History - Home. (2012). Retrieved April 05, 2016, from <http://www.hawaiihistory.org/index.cfm?fuseaction=ig.page>

Hoffman, D. (2012). Hawaii's War. New York, NY: New Corner

Neil, D. (2014). A Military History of Sovereign Hawaii. New York, NY: Hillshine.

Oahu Hawaii Military Bases. (2008). Retrieved April 05, 2016, from <http://www.military.com/base-guide/oahu-hawaii-military-bases>

POP Tours: Militarization Of Hawaii

